BQT Solutions secures Patent in the USA for Secure Data Transmission from a Biometric device

John Genner, Managing Director of BQT Solutions Limited is pleased to announce the securing of a patent in the United States "Method of Secure Transmission" by the US Patent office for data being transmitted from a biometric device back to an Access control system/ Time attendance or any other centralised/networked system via an encrypted line.

"BQT's HSM (High Security Module) takes the encrypted data transmitted from the Biometric device and deciphers the information which is then delivered to the back end system for processing. The HSM resides in the secure area of the facility and is the key piece of technology used in this method to ensure that the data cables between the access point and the server/controller cannot be compromised by hackers using electronic listening devices.

The HSM is programmable to allow organisations to use/choose their preferred form of data encryption.

In our current global climate, the need for such measures will increase as governments/organisations strive to protect their facilities when addressing security risks and exposures to an attack."
